

Brandon Stelly

The Quality of Nature

I continue exploring the quality of nature and deal with some issues that stress me out. The project became an inspiration through each of the abstract features, mutual outcome, and realism based on specific nature films. I noticed there are some specific changes that I need to correct.

I was able to fix the blurriness that I made having trouble with during my midterm project. There is also the color correction and the voice recognition. After adjusting the ISO and Shutter Speed from both cameras, most of my images and videos became clearer.

At the beginning of this nature, the film is where I have some stress issues that involve school, work, and home. Keeping customers happy while doing shopping, focusing more on my project instead of having fun, and doing additional housework back at home became stressful. I decided to get out of the house for a while and get some fresh air.

I went to Alexander Deuseen Park because it is close to my hometown. The park is the perfect place to witness the scenery of nature and avoid some stress. I also went to Dwight D. Eisenhower to experience the beauty of the lake. Eisenhower Park is where people fish, do some camping, relax, and have fun. Heading to both nature parks was able to clear my head from all these stress-like issues. Taking in the necessity of trees, rivers, fishing ponds, lakes, and other natural types made me fully energized for tomorrow. Once I clear my head, I can focus more on my job, school, and home without any problems.